HISTORY

The pub itself was converted from a farmhouse in 1991 although it served briefly as an ale house in the mid 19th Century to benefit the builders of the North Staffordshire Railway, who opened their connection to Burton via Tutbury in 1848 to gain access to the growing brewery trade.

The Tutbury Jinny was a locomotive, referred to as The Jinny. Its name was probably derived from the word engine. It proved a quick and popular service from Burton to Stoke and Crewe. The stations at Rolleston, Stretton and Horninglow were closed on 1st January 1949 and the last run of the Jinny was 11th June 1960.
